Have you ever walked in a window? Would you like to know how a fly feels? Learn the thrill of walking between glass and on glass four stories above ground. Have you ever lost yourself in the passage ways of the underground city? Come and follow a guide who can lead you in and about and safely out of these New York Catacombs. Were you thrilled by the Streamline trains? See what thrilled our great grandfathers, in the early days of transportation. Did you know there is an art gallery in the Grand Central Station? In the Grand Central Art Galleries will be found the most noteworthy works of living American artists, a panoramic view of the latest tendencies within our own borders. Meet Mr. Perrine at 1:50 p.m. in the 42nd Street entrance of the Chrysler Building. Take Lexington Avenue Subway to 42nd Street - Grand Central Station.

Wednesday, December 12 - CLASS MEETS AT SCHOOL P. S. 21 - Mott and Spring Streets

Thursday, December 13 - THE MORGAN LIBRARY - 29 East 36th Street

This wonderful collection is worthy of the name it bears, where items are of such pricelessness and delicacy that "one soiled thumb would undo the work of 900 years and a misplaced cough would be a disaster". Inestimable treasures - rare printed books, illustrated manuscripts, original copies. Meet Mr. Perrine at 1:50 at the entrance to the Library at 29 East 36th Street. Take Lexington Avenue Subway to 33rd Street (local).

Friday, December 14 - S. S. QUEEN OF BERMUDA - Pier 95 - West 55th Street

"To the Queen's taste", might well be applied to this new member of the royal new Furness Bermuda Line - she is truly a regal ship. Her's is the feminine luxury one associates with the great queens of old, a luxury that combines perfectly with her lavishness. Here are exotic figures beckoning from silk Chinese tapestries, mysteriously aglow with indirect lighting effects - a ship that is a world of beauty in itself and not merely the means of transportation from one port to another. Meet Mr. Perrine at 1:50 in the waiting room of Pier 95. Take 59th St. Crosstown trolley to 55th & 10th Ave.
